It entrenches the rights of each scholar to be educated and to grow in a happy, caring and secure environment.

This Code of Conduct obliges scholars, educators and parents to accept responsibility in the fostering of an environment of mutual respect and adherence to a prescribed set of norms and standards. In the application of disciplinary measures, the school will at all times adopt a flexible approach within the boundaries of the Code of Conduct and act with the best interest of the school and individual scholar in mind.

- Refer to attached extract regarding Hair Rules & Hair Rules Committee.

“With the growing pressure on schools regarding discipline structures around hair rules, both globally and nationally, we have decided to formalise a Hair Rule Committee at Graeme College. This will be comprised by staff, learners and current parents. The goal is to feed back to the School Governing Body, with regards to updating our school hair policies as well as maintaining consistency with regard to our feedback to learners and parents about appropriate hairstyles. At a recent SGB meeting, it was also decided to update the current ‘Rules & Regulations’ and ‘Code of Conduct’ to also include the phrase: ‘No Fashion Hairstyles’ with regards to our current hair policy. The Hair Rule Committee might well deal with daily ongoing issues at school. This will significantly influence the organizational culture of Graeme College and we need to be proactive in this regard.

This is an international debate and not a South African issue alone. The grim history of South Africa has also obviously created an additional complication to hair rules, with most of the schools rules being established at all previously ‘Model C’ schools, before the 1992 referendum. Many schools have not gone back and updated those policies adequately enough and therefore there are still ongoing frustrations regarding the terminology used at many schools.

Unfortunately, outside influences often interfere with schools enforcing their policies with regards to hair styles. And in many cases, the hair rule saga is used as a source of political debate and grandstanding in South Africa. It is crucial that these policies are allowed to be regulated by school educators within the parameters expected by the School Governing Body. Most onlookers won’t understand that discipline in the school environment is dramatically influenced by uniformity. Unfortunately the lack of understanding of the context of the relationship between dress/ neatness/ uniformity and the daily discipline within a classroom, will only be completely understood by an educator within the classroom. So the ongoing question - ‘how does a hairstyle influence a child’s education in the broader context?’ is asked without the knowledge of daily discipline within schools. Graeme College is a very proud school with strong roots in tradition and discipline. Our Code of Conduct enables the school to run very efficiently and allows the learners the opportunity to be very proud of the culture that exists at Graeme.

The same debate has been argued in New Zealand recently. A short extract from a news article reveals some interesting reading:

“All schools have rules, there is nothing special here about Auckland Grammar. There are rules because most high schools are large institutions managing large numbers of kids - and if they didn't have rules it'd be chaos.

The difficulty here from a legal point of view is how do individual students get to pick and choose which rules apply to them? Surely a dangerous precedent is set if we go down that track and open that particular can of worms.

Also, how do you conform to a rule in order to get into a school, then knowingly flout it once inside? What message is that sending?

It's hard enough for schools these days to manage teenagers with their many and varied issues, senses of entitlement and expectations - without having to juggle lawsuits over hair length...”

This ‘battle’ against the new norms and standards in a millennial society is a tough task within the school environment. Graeme College embraces a conformity, and still celebrates the uniformity of each individual learner. At all times we are passionate about protecting our learners against any form of discrimination and also always encouraging and celebrating differences in culture and race. A number of years ago, we decided to adopt one of the mantras from a transformation conference, where the theme included a ‘celebration of diversity’. The idea of ‘instilling a sense of belonging’ within each learner at school has developed into one of our own mantras at Graeme College. We just need to make sure that at the same time, we keep educating all our learners about personal neatness when wearing the school uniform. We are determined that our organizational norms cannot be exclusionary in any way but have tried to take a stand against what is referred to as ‘fashion hairstyles’, which is a modern trend in many schools. At the same time we also respect the differences within the different cultures and races at Graeme College and within those parameters we strive to be consistent as possible.”

No learner shall have, on his person, any such phone during any form of testing, assessment or examination. The video or sound recording of any school activity by using such a phone is strictly prohibited and any learner found guilty of such an offence will be dealt with in the harshest possible way. This may result in the learner being removed from the School. The School accepts no responsibility for any loss or theft of such phones at the School. ## EXEMPTION

The School believes that these rules are fair and consistent and for the benefit of all learners and staff at Graeme College. The School requests that all learners adhere to these rules at all times.

If any of the above rules are in conflict with a learner's sincerely held religious or cultural beliefs the learner may apply for an exemption from the said rule. Such an application must be in writing and addressed to the Headmaster. Where learners are able to express their own will, they themselves must apply and enclose written parental endorsement. Where learners are not able to express their own will, the parent(s) must apply on the learners' behalf. Applications for exemptions will be considered by the School Governing Body.

SOCIAL MEDIA POLICY BACKGROUND

Modern day learners find themselves in a technological world where they access, create, collaborate and contribute to Facebook, Twitter, blogs, discussion fora, wikis, podcasts or other social media for classroom or school use. Graeme College social media guidelines support the responsible engagement of learners, educators and parents in social media and other online educational platforms and strive to create an atmosphere of trust and individual accountability. The information produced on social media by staff, learners and their parents is a reflection of the Graeme College community and is subject to the schools':

- Code of conduct
- Disciplinary policy and procedures

PURPOSE

The purpose of the Social Networking Policy is to:

- Guide the educators and learners of Graeme College to work safely and responsibly with the internet and other communication technologies by practicing good digital citizenship and digital literacy
- Set clear rules of behaviour relevant to social networking
- Give a clear message that disciplinary or legal action will be taken in the event of non-adherence to the guidelines
- Ensure safer working practice
- Minimise the risk of misplaced and malicious allegations made against adults working with learners
- Prevent adults abusing or misusing their position of trust

The school and the management reserve the right to make professional judgments in situations not covered by this policy. The school will only intervene in out-of-school activities if it is in the best interest of the learner or if the learner's behaviour brings the school's name into disrepute. It must also be noted as the digital environment is a fluid environment and constantly evolves and adapts, so must the school's social media policy evolve and adapt. Therefore, as and when changes need to be made to this policy these changes will be made and communicated. It is thus important and expected that all parties concerned will check this document regularly.
